ROAD REPAIR WORK TO START FIRST OF WEEK

Improvement to be Made on Route Towards Bentleyville

ENGINEERS VISIT HERE

O. K. Taylor and Construction Superintendents Take Trip Over Road

Work will be started Monday on the repairing of approximately 2.6 miles of state highway leading from the end of the bricked Charleroi road known as Lincoln avenue extension to the "twin bridge" at Colyin's farm. The state highway department will do the work which will take about two months.

O. K. Taylor, district engineer together with W. L. Hite, superintendent of construction and R. R. Sutton, construction engineer for the state highway department autoed to Charleroi Friday from Washington and went over the road to determine just what would be needed. They determined on general repairs.

At the present time the road is in a particularly bad shape. The attention of state officials was called to the matter a short time ago and was directed to the fact that bad weather that would practically make the road impassable was coming along. Then came the orders for improvement.

The improvement of the road will mean a continuous stretch from Charleroi to Bentleyville. The Charleroi end is paved and so is the Bentleyville end. According to Mr. Taylor two months will be sufficient time in which to properly repair the road.

Respectfully submitted,

Kelly it is stated told him to touch it and see. Ivil took him at his word and an explosion resulted.

CORN STALKS GROW TO AMAZING HEIGHT

"Twins" From Crow Farm Look Like the Original That Jack Climbed--Would Need Stepladder to Pick Their Ears

Besides growing tall governors and having tomatoes growing on vines like grapes, the Charleroi district has developed another phenomena which is attracting much attention. Displayed in front of the Frye hardware store in Fallowfield avenue are two immense stalks of corn, each measuring in height 16 feet and 8 inches. They were grown on the Hugh Crow farm in Fallowfield township near Charleroi and though they are whoppers, Mr. Crow says they are not within several feet of the largest he has grown this year. Last week he had two stalks measuring over 19 feet which he intended to bring to town, but they were seen by some person in passing the field and one morning they were no more, having been stolen by some person in search of natural freaks.

The stalks on display each contain one ear of corn, nine feet from the ground. They are twin stalks in every particular and are attracting much attention.

Mr. Crow has always been known as one of the most progressive and modern farmers of the county and the great stalks of corn stand as a monument to his prowess and ability as a tiller of the sail.

ORDINANCE FOR CALIFORNIA FOR STREET RAILWAY

At a discordant and stormy session of the California borough council Wednesday evening an ordinance granting to Charles H. Storey of Brownsville and his associates, successors and assigns the right to operate a street car line over certain streets of the borough was presented and passed second reading. The rules and regular course of procedure was then dispensed with and the ordinance passed third and final reading and is now ready for the signature of the burgess. No material opposition was raised to the ordinance but several of the councilmen engaged in a controversy over trivial and personal matters.

The line is to be a part of a system that is proposed to build across the lower eastern end of the county connecting up California and the Fredericktown region. It is a project first organized by Brownsville and California men, and if carried out, will result in a new and productive region being tapped.

Investigated Two Deaths.

Two deaths were investigated Friday by Coroner James Heffran. He inquired into the death of F. Reeds, who was killed on the tipple at Ellsworth on Saturday. The man attempted to pass between two cars and was crushed when another car bumped into them. The finding was for accidental death. The other case was that of Peter Tocki who was injured Thursday in the Gallatin mine and later died in the Monongahela hospital. The same verdict was returned in this case.

ROAD WILL BE BUILT THROUGH NEW EAGLE

Frightened Borough Hears That State Will Start Work

IS END OF TROUBLE

Engineer Foster Gave Information That New Eagle Was in Wrong

Assurance has been given by the state highway department that before the snow flies the improvement of a small stretch of road through New Eagle borough will have been completed.

Chief Engineer S. D. Foster of the state highway department a short time ago stated that the improvement of the road could not possibly be made under the old contract and that the borough council had forfeited the contract when they refused to grant the Pittsburg Railways a double track privilege through the borough. Those interested in the proposition were not satisfied however and went over Foster's head to Governor Tener and Commissioner Bigelow. This is good news to the citizens New Eagle and to the residents of Monongahela and the progress on the improvement will be watched anxiously. The Railways company will get their double track privilege. The strip is about three quarters of a mile long and the expense of its improvement will be one-fourth by New Eagle borough, one-fourth by the county and one-half by the state.

The information has been held up waiting instructions from the central office of the McCrory company and will in all probability be made by F. D. White, the local manager.

INTEREST IN GOOD ROADS

It is gratifying to learn that the grange societies and boards of trade from various parts of the state have joined with the automobile associations in their campaign for good roads, remarks the Philadelphia Press. The attendance at the good roads convention in Harrisburg shows that farmers and merchants as well as motorists are interesting themselves in the cause. Since the $50,000,000 bond issue was first talked about it has been pointed out that first-class roads are not intended merely for the added comfort of the automobilist. Their effect on the farmer, on the market, on the value of land are of far greater importance. Will the people remember this when they go to vote in November?

The Pennsylvania good roads association has completed its organization and announces its intention to carry on a vigorous campaign for the passage of the constitutional amendment. Now that two legislatures have passed it and the amendment is before the people it is feared that the required majority may not be obtained because the average voter is not alive to the importance of it. To remedy this a wide-spead publicity campaign will be conducted to advise the people of the nature of the proposed amendment and the imperative need that it be passed.

Should the projected bond issue be authorized Pennsylvania will be enabled to take her place among the foremost of her sister states that have already solved the question of first-class highway construction.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"Objections have been made that certain items are not specific enough in exits a newspapers," says a contributor, who submits the following as a sample of improvement:

"John Jones, the ditch digger who works for the So-and-So contracting company when he is not temporarily disabled by reasons of an internal disturbance resulting from too frequent indulgence in jaundiced juice, and who lives at meal time and most of the nights in a 20 by 36 building abuting on the west side of Place street next door to where Jim Jack [illegible] eat and got sent to the penitentiary; and one block from Sam Sams, who stole $10,000 and got sent to the legislature, with Mrs. Jones went today to eat a few meals at the house occupied by Mrs. Jones' brother-in-law's sister's uncle in the adjoining township. The uncle's family is unknown but it is generally rumored that he is a defunct deputy sheriff. The Joneses went away because they didn't have anything in the house to eat except four aged and infirm eggs and aged hen fruit always acts badly on Jones' nervous system just when he is recovering from his periodic fall from grace."

FILES SUIT TO RECOVER DAMAGES

Claiming that the Young and Williams Electric company, of McDonald used gas for which they did not pay, the Tri-State Gas company has entered suit through its counsel to recover $2,249.75 with interest from September 25, 1908. The electric company is composed of W. H. Young, A. Valentour, B. Frankle, G. W. Smith and F. Kessley, all well known men of McDonald.

According to the allegation the defendant company by a representative or employe so tampered with the gas piping so that a certain percentage of the gas passed through a pipe around the meter to the gas engine which operated the machinery in their plant. This tampering was discovered and a demand made upon the defendant company to pay what was due for the gas illegally obtained, but no settlement was made.

It is alleged that from November 1, 1901 until September 26, 1908, basing the amount of gas used by the defendants in accordance with the appliance in use by the defendants and in accordance with the results secured, used 22,122,000 cubic feet of gas, of which amount 13,122,000 passed through the meter, leaving, it is alleged, 8,999,000 cubic feet of gas not paid for. For this, it is alleged, there is due 25 cents per cubic foot.

This electric company is not now in business and has not been for two years.

THE POOREST OF ALL PEOPLE

Natives of the Arctics Who Have Enough to Eat Are Considered Very Fortunate.

I have not known so poor a winter during the whole of my stay among the Eskimos (now 22 years), says a writer in the Christian Herald. While the coast is ice-bound, the days short, snowstorms frequent and the thermometer often 40 degrees below zero, it is not possible for the Eskimo to do much to secure a living. One way for the women to produce something was to cut holes through the sea ice, which reaches a thickness of six feet, and there they stood fishing for rock cod, most days securing only between five and ten fish. The mission endeavored to help, but poverty was so general that all resources were taxed to the utmost.

An outsider has no idea of what poverty among the Eskimos means. At the best of times the wants of an Eskimo are few and his food consists of the coarsest of substances. Seal walrus and whale meat form a large part of their diet, and the blubber of these animals serves in the place of pork or butter.

In China the famished inhabitants subsisted on roots or some inferior vegetation, but here the vegetable kingdom has nothing to offer. The earth is frozen and deeply covered with snow and ice; the birds have gone south and one might walk for miles without seeing a living creature. At the same time it is of interest to know even these primitive people have for ages found a kind of substitute for food somewhere. Along the beach, which is known to have plenty of seaweed, holes are cut through the thick ice and the seaweed and mussels pulled up through the holes, and it is on record that the Eskimos have sustained life on this, one might say, refuse of the sea, during the long winter months.

The Eskimo has no word for "God" in his language, and it has been fitly marked that the very austere aspect of life may have helped to exclude the conception of a superhuman benevolent Being from the beliefs and superstitions of these people of the Arctic.

THOSE WHO DO NOT THINK

Eskimos Believe It Is Not Necessary If They Have Enough Meat to Eat.

Where the physical struggle for life is at its keenest, as it is among the Eskimos, the years glide by free from the more subtle cares and worries of the civilized man. The Eskimo, says Mr. Knud Rasmussen in "The People of the Polar North," does not count the days, and keeps no record of time. All his thoughts are centered on hunting.

Once I asked an Eskimo who seemed to be plunged in reflection, "What are you thinking about?"

He laughed at my question, and said: "Oh, it is only you white men who go so much for thinking! Up here we only think of our flesh-pits, and whether we have enough for the long dark of the winter. If we have meat enough then there is no need to think. I have meat and to spare!"

I saw that I had insulted him by crediting him with thought.

On another occasion I asked an unusually intelligent Eskimo, Panigpak, who had taken part in Peary's last north polar expedition:

"Tell me, what did you suppose was the object of all your exertions? What did you think when you saw the land disappear behind you and you found yourself out on the drifting ice-floes?"

"Think?" said Panigpak, astonished. "I did not need to think. Peary did that!"

Eating becomes the great thing with the Eskimos. I once excused myself, when paying a visit, with the plea that I had already eaten and had had enough. I was laughed at, and the answer I received was:

"There thou talkest like a dog! Dogs can be stuffed till they are satisfied and can eat no more; but people—people can always eat!"

Art and Engineering.

The close connection of the artistic and the mechanical instinct is shown again in recent developments in France.

France is doubtless the most eminent modern nation in the world of art. But in the past 30 years she has come to be one of the foremost in mechanical engineering; as the development of the automobile and the aeroplane bears witness. Coincidentally, there has been at least a relative falling off in her standing in art.

This looks as if the demand of modern times had turned machine-wards the genius which in an earlier day would have expressed itself with brush and chisel.

The artist and the engineer or inventor have the same faculty of seeing a thing before it is finished, the same keen sense of proportion and relation, the same intense desire to put ideas into concrete form.

When America pauses from her rush in mechanical invention, she will develop an artistic power that will astonish the world.

Historic British Ship.

One of the most interesting ships afloat is the Eagle, which lies in one of the docks of the River Mersey, England. For more than fifty years the Eagle has served as a training ship. It was launched in 1804, and took part in several important engagements in the early part of the last century, when the Napoleonic power was at its height.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Charleroi People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Charleroi people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Ewing, 913 Shady Ave., Charleroi, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills were used in our family some time ago with the best of results. We procured our supply at Piper Bros.' Drug Store. It does not take this remedy long to remove any attack of kidney trouble. I advise anyone troubled by disordered kidneys to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial.

WHERE THE CHILDREN OBEY

Courtesy to the Elders Universal in That Country, Makes the German Home Ideal.

As a rule German children of all classes are treated as children and taught the elementary virtue of obedience. Das Recht des Kindes is a new cry with some of the people, but nevertheless Germany is one of the few remaining civilized countries where the elders still have rights and privileges. I heard of an English woman the other day who said that she had never eaten the wing of a chicken, because when she was young it was always given to the older people, and now that she was old it was saved for the children. If she lived in Germany she would still have a chance, provided she kept away from a small loud set, who in all matters of education and morality would like to turn the world upside down.

In most German homes the noisy, spoilt American child would not be endured for a moment, and the little tyrant of a French family would be taught its place to the comfort and advantage of all concerned. I have dined with a large family where eight young ones of various ages sat at an overflow table and did not disturb their elders by a sound. It was not because the elders were harsh or the young folks repressed, but because Germany teaches its youth to behave.

The little girls still drop you a pretty old-fashioned courtesy when they greet you. The little boys, if you are staying in the house with them, come and shake hands at unexpected times—when they arrive from school, for instance, and before they go out for a walk. They play the same games as English children and I need hardly say that they are brought up on the same fairy stories, because many of our favorites come from Germany.—From "Home Life in Germany," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick.

HAD LAID AWAY THE BANJO

Old Darky Found His Talents Brought Him Into Grave Danger, and He Fled.

Senator John Sharp Williams tells of a "character" in a southern state known as "the best banjo player anywhere." It followed, therefore, that when a lady in the town whereof this instrumentalist is a resident wished to show some northern visitors just what a genuine old darky could do with a banjo she called at Uncle Henry's little cabin and stated her wishes to his wife.

"I is very sorry, missy," said the wife, "but Henry he ain't playin' de banjo any mo'." She then indicated the spot where the instrument lay, covered with dust. "He jes' puts in all his time fishin' now."

"What led him to give up his playing?" asked the visitor. "Has he got religion?"

"No, missy, dat wuthless nigger ain't got no religion. No, missy; he's done got skeered."

"Scared? Of what?"

"By dat minstrel show, honey. De boss of dat show he hearn de ole man playin', an' he offers him a stidy job doin' it. Yassum, an' it skeered Henry so bad dat he quit banjo playin' right away."

So They All Ate Onions.

Sallie Fisher, the musical comedy star, who sang herself into the upper register of popular favor with that "Dearie" song, has a mother who occasionally gets Sallie into trouble. It was at a little dinner party in New York last season and there were four at the table, Sallie, her mother and two friends. Mrs. Fisher carefully scanned the menu card and then stated, with particular emphasis, that she wanted an order of Spanish onions, sliced and raw, and didn't care what else was ordered.

"Mother!" ejaculated Sallie. "Onions? And before the performance?"

"Onions and before the performance," insisted Mrs. Fisher. Then she cast a rather scornful expression toward the fastidious daughter. "If these boys could see you eating garlic in the summer time they would have no objections to my eating onions in the winter time," said Mrs. Fisher, decisively, whereupon Sallie collapsed.

Then they all ate onions.

She Hadn't Taught as Long as That.

A primary teacher, whose efficiency had extended her term of service in one school so long that she was teaching the second generation, frequently spoke to her pupils of the time when their parents had been in her room and often mentioned persons about town who had gone to school to her.

Just before the winter holidays she took occasion to speak of the significance at Christmas, explaining that it was the anniversary of the birth of Jesus. The story was familiar to most of the children, but one little fellow, whose religious education was not as extensive as that of the others, spoiled the effect by innocently piping up:

"Did he ever go to school to you?"

Motor Tricycle.

The most recent novelty in London is the automobile tricycle, invented for shopping purposes. It is operated standing and takes up scarcely more room than the driver, so that it can be propelled into a shop and wheeled about as desired. LIVING TOWER IS UNIQUE

Captain Meeker Built It on the Tops of Four Redwood Trees in California.

What is known as the "Living Tower" (says a writer in the Wide World Magazine) stands on the very summit of a hill more than two hundred feet high at Camp Meeker, a summer resort in Sonoma county, California. It was Captain Meeker, an old pioneer, who first conceived the idea of building a tower on the very summit of a high hill near his hotel, and while looking around one day for a suitable site, he found four young redwood trees standing about twelve feet apart, representing a perfect square. The trees were each about one hundred and fifty feet high. Fifty feet of each top was lopped off, and the work of building six stories was then commenced. From top to bottom the Living Tower was one hundred feet high. Each floor is about twelve by twelve feet, and rests on strong timbers, the ends of which are securely attached to the four trees by means of steel cables and bolts. So strongly was every part braced that the whole structure does not move as much as one would naturally suppose, even when rocked by heavy winds. In the building great care was taken by the workmen to cut only the branches growing on the inside of the square, and the trees were not chopped, mutilated, or weakened any more than could possibly be avoided. Leading up from each story are broad stairways, so that one may ascend and descend with ease and perfect safety, while around the edge of each floor are strong railings to prevent accidents. Since this tower was completed, the trees have grown and flourished just as well as before. This living tower is claimed to be the only one of its kind in the world.

To Escape the Storm.

Many, many storms there are that lie low and hug the ground; and the way to escape them is to go up the mountain side, and get higher than they are.—Henry Ward Beecher.

DANCES FOR THE PARENTS

Hurdy-Gurdies With Old Peasant Tunes Cause Delight in New York's East Side.

Not long ago a picturesque experiment was made by a number of men and women who are interested in the welfare of the lower east side. As folk dancing has proved so popular with the children of the foreign residents of the city, as shown by the eagerness with which they have taken up the dancing lessons given in the public schools, the interested men and women decided that their parents might also be pleased with the opportunity of joining in some of the peasant dances with which they were familiar in their youth in the fatherland. With this idea in mind, a number of hurdy-gurdy players were persuaded to put into their machines records of the old native dance tunes to which the residents of the east side had been accustomed to dance at home.

Of course the records had first to be made, but this was done and a number of the hurdy-gurdies equipped in this manner were started on a triumphant career.

And were they successful? Well, it wasn't a question as to that. With the first sound of the well known strains the men, women and children of the east side came tripping out of their houses mad with delight and breaking into their native steps the minute they reached the sidewalk.

"It was the greatest success in the world," declared one of the promoters of the project. "The only trouble was that it was too successful. They blocked the streets and the sidewalks and impeded traffic so that the policemen had difficulty in getting things started again. It was perfectly idyllic in theory, but, after all, Grand street isn't a village green and it didn't really do—it wasn't possible.

ALL COURTEOUS AND HONEST

High Praise of the Character of Eskimos and Icelanders Given By Explorers.

If we should ever learn to appreciate the finer values of human nature the results would certainly be damaging to our self esteem. Mr. Stefansson, whose reports of Eskimo life have received so much attention, tells us much of the extraordinary courtesy and virtue of these people, and so confirms the testimony to the same effect by Captain Amundsen. Stefansson not only received the finest hospitality, but he tells us that his hosts suppressed every sign of curiosity as to his instruments and memoranda. They explained to him that these things were none of their business. They always sang when they approached his hut in the morning, so that he might not be taken unawares, and they politely waited outside until invited to enter. Coming further south we read that Iceland, with a population of 78,000, has only one policeman and that the taste for alcoholic liquors is practically unknown among the people A recent work on Finland tells us of a curious custom among the country people. Those who have money to deposit in the bank are in the habit of placing it on a stone in the public road and it is collected by the banker from the nearest town as he makes his periodical trips for that purpose. It may be that discourtesy and dishonesty are now inseparable from civilization, but a separation will have to be effected if the civilization is to endure.

Flight Would Not Be Hopeless.

Thomas B. Reed did not "think imperially," to use Mr. Chamberlain's sonorous phrase, and it was dangerous to wax eloquent in his presence over American expansion.

Once, when were in the thick of our troubles in the Philippines, Mr. Reed, Mr. Choate and Mr. G. W. Smalley were guests at Ellerslie, Governor Morton's place on the Hudson. The situation was debated at length and with great freedom.

"Mr. Choate," writes Mr. Smalley in "Anglo-American Memories," "gave us in a forcible and forensic way—and no man could state a case better—the reasons for keeping the Philippines and reducing the 'rebellious' Filipinos to order.

"We all listened. No one interrupted the flow of Mr. Choate's argument. Mr. Reed, who, as is well known, had opposed the acquisition of the islands, did not venture a word. At the end, Mr. Choate, urging that surrender was impossible, asked:

"'What do you suppose the Filipinos would do if we withdrew the American troops?'

"'Well,' drawled Mr. Reed, 'I don't suppose they would pursue us farther than San Francisco.'

"That ended the discussion," concludes Mr. Smalley.—Youth's Companion.

Lure of Colonial Mirror.

Gazed there ever a man in the face of an old mirror the life of which dates back to Colonial days, without seeing therein some thoughts of powdered wigs, silk brocades, charming couples dancing the minuet and bowls of punch?

Mirrors of the Colonial period have survived the ravages of years and can be found in nearly all the eastern states and Canada. It is doubtful whether any mirrors were brought to this country much before 1700, for it was not until 1670 that they were made in England, although one may be able to pick up some very old specimens in Canada, as mirror making flourished in France in the early part of the eighteenth century.

BIRTHDAY HONOR SOCIAL FUNCTION FOR MISS CALVERT

In compliment to her birthday anniversary Miss Jean Calvert, of Fallowfield avenue was honor guest at a cleverly arranged surprise Friday night. The affair was planned and successfully carried out by her mother and the Calvert home was the scene of a very delightful affair. Girl friends to the number of a score and two responded to the invitations and gathered during the absence of Miss Calvert. Upon her return she found her home in the hands of her friends and though she was surprised, her ability as a hostess quickly asserted itself and the guests were made to feel at home.

A pleasant series of contests was enjoyed and Misses Roberta Trew and Nell Pieper were rewarded with dainty prizes. Musical numbers further enhanced the evening's enjoyment and later refreshments came as a pleasing diversion. Favors of cunning little baskets filled with bon bons were distributed.

Among the guests from out of town were Miss es Alenda Forsythe and Alice Kelly of Monongahela and Mary Lindsay of Pittsburg.

PLAN CANVASS IN INTERESTS OF LIBRARY

To place the Charleroi free library on a substantial footing and to equip it with a sufficient number of volumes the work of canvassing of the town will be started shortly. Women's missionary and aid societies and women's clubs will be interested in the movement and an effort will be made to secure books from the Charleroi school library.

Miss Anne McDonald of the Pennsylvania library commission was in Charleroi Friday night and met with the organizers of the library movement here. She spoke of the value of a free library and told of how free libraries were patronized in other cities and towns.

Improvement to be Made on Route Towards Bentleyville

ENGINEERS VISIT HERE

O. K. Taylor and Construction Superintendents Take Trip Over Road

Work will be started Monday on the repairing of approximately 2.6 miles of state highway leading from the end of the bricked Charleroi road known as Lincoln avenue extension to the "twin bridge" at Colyer's farm. The state highway department will do the work which will take about two months.

O. K. Taylor, district engineer together with W. L. Hite, superintendent of construction and R. R. Sutton, construction engineer for the state highway department autoed to Charleroi Friday from Washington and went over the road to determine just what would be needed. They determined on general repairs.

At the present time the road is in a particularly bad shape. The attention of state officials was called to the matter a short time ago and was directed to the fact that bad weather that would practically make the road impassable was coming along. Then came the orders for improvement.

The improvement of the road will mean a continuous stretch from Charleroi to Bentleyville. The Charleroi end is paved and so is the Bentleyville end. According to Mr. Taylor two months will be sufficient time in which to properly repair the road.

CORN STALKS GROW TO AMAZING HEIGHT

"Twins" From Crow Farm Look Like the Original That Jack Climbed--Would Need Stepladder to Pick Their Ears

Besides growing tall governors and having tomatoes growing on vines like grapes, the Charleroi district has developed another phenomena which is attracting much attention. Displayed in front of the Frye hardware store in Fallowfield avenue are two immense stalks of corn, each measuring in height 16 feet and 8 inches. They were grown on the Hugh Crow farm in Fallowfield township near Charleroi and though they are whoppers, Mr. Crow says they are not within several feet of the largest he has grown this year. Last week he had two stalks measuring over 19 feet which he intended to bring to town, but they were seen by some person in passing the field and one morning they were no more, having been stolen by some person in search of natural freaks.

The stalks on display each contain one ear of corn, nine feet from the ground. They are twin stalks in every particular and are attracting much attention.

Mr. Crow has always been known as one of the most progressive and modern farmers of the county and the great stalks of corn stand as a monument to his prowess and ability as a tiller of the sail.

ORDINANCE FOR CALIFORNIA FOR STREET RAILWAY

At a discordant and stormy session of the California borough council Wednesday evening an ordinance granting to Charles H. Storey of Brownsville and his associates, successors and assigns the right to operate a street car line over certain streets of the borough was presented and passed second reading. The rules and regular course of procedure was then dispensed with and the ordinance passed third and final reading and is now ready for the signature of the burgess. No material opposition was raised to the ordinance but several of the councilmen engaged in a controversy over trivial and personal matters.

The line is to be a part of a system that is proposed to build across the lower eastern end of the county connecting up California and the Fredericktown region. It is a project first organized by Brownsville and California men, and if carried out, will result in a new and productive region being tapped.

The other case was that of Peter Tocki who was injured Thursday in the Gallatin mine and later died in the Monongahela hospital. The same verdict was returned in this case.

Frightened Borough Hears That State Will Start Work

[illegible] END OF TROUBLE

Engineer Foster Gave Information That New Eagle Was in Wrong

Assurance has been given by the state highway department that before the snow flies the improvement of a small stretch of road through New Eagle borough will have been completed.

Chief Engineer S. D. Foster of the state highway department a short time ago stated that the improvement of the road could not possibly be made under the old contract and that the borough council had forfeited the contract when they refused to grant the Pittsburg Railways a double track privilege through the borough. These interested in the proposition were not satisfied however and went over Foster's head to Senator Penrose and Commissioner Bigelow. This is good news to the citizens New Eagle and to the residents of Monongahela and the project on the improvement will be watched anxiously. The Railways company will get their double track privilege. The strip is about three quarters of a mile long and the expense of its improvement will be one-fourth by New Eagle borough, one-fourth by the county and one-half by the state.

INTEREST IN GOOD ROADS

It is gratifying to learn that the grange societies and boards of trade from various parts of the state have joined with the automobile associations in their campaign for good roads, remarks the Philadelphia Press. The attendance at the good roads convention in Harrisburg shows that farmers and merchants as well as motorists are interesting themselves in the cause. Since the $50,000,000 bond issue was first talked about it has been pointed out that first-class roads are not intended merely for the added comfort of the automobilist. Their effect on the farmer, on the market, on the value of land are of far greater importance. Will the people remember this when they go to vote in November?

The Pennsylvania good roads association has completed its organization and announces its intention to carry on a vigorous campaign for the passage of the constitutional amendment. Now that two legislatures have passed it and the amendment is before the people, it is feared that the required majority may not be obtained because the average voter is not alive to the importance of it. To remedy this a wide-spead publicity campaign will be conducted to advise the people of the nature of the proposed amendment and the imperative need that it be passed.

Should the projected bond issue be authorized Pennsylvania will be enabled to take her place among the foremost of her sister states that have already solved the question of first-class highway construction

The uncle's family is unknown but it is generally rumored that he is a defunct deputy sheriff. The Joneses went away because they didn't have anything in the house to eat except four aged and infirm eggs and aged hen fruit always acts badly on Jones' nervous system just when he is recovering from his periodic fall from grace."

FILES SUIT TO RECOVER DAMAGES

Claiming that the Young and Williams Electric company, of McDonald used gas for which they did not pay, the Tri-State Gas company has entered [illegible] to recover $2,249.75 with interest from September 25, 1908. The electric company is composed of W. H. Young, A. Valentour, B Frankie, G W Smith and F Kessley, all well known men of McDonald.

According to the allegation the defendant company by a representative or employe so tampered with the gas piping so that a certain percentage of the gas passed through a pipe around the meter to the gas engine which operated the machinery in their plant. This tampering was discovered and a demand made upon the defendant company to pay what was due for the gas illegally obtained, but no settlement was made.

It is alleged that from November 1, 1901 until September 26, 1908, basing the amount of gas used by the defendants in accordance with the appliance in use by the defendants and in accordance with the results secured, used 22,122,000 cubic feet of gas, of which amount 13,122,000 passed through the meter, leaving, it is alleged, 8,999,000 cubic feet of gas not paid for. For this, it is alleged, there is due 25 cents per cubic foot.

This electric company is not now in business and has not been for two years.

THE POOREST OF ALL PEOPLE

Natives of the Arctics Who Have Enough to Eat Are Considered Very Fortunate.

I have not known so poor a winter during the whole of my stay among the Eskimos (now 22 years), says a writer in the Christian Herald. While the coast is ice-bound, the days short, snowstorms frequent and the thermometer often 40 degrees below zero, it is not possible for the Eskimo to do much to secure a living One way for the women to produce something was to cut holes through the sea ice, which reaches a thickness of six feet, and there they stood fishing for rock cod, most days securing only between five and ten fish. The mission endeavored to help, but poverty was so general that all resources were taxed to the utmost.

An outsider has no idea of what poverty among the Eskimos means. At the best of times the wants of an Eskimo are few and his food consists of the coarsest of substances. Seal walrus and whale meat form a large part of their diet and the blubber of these animals serves in the place of pork or butter.

In China the famished inhabitants subsisted on roots or some inferior vegetation, but here the vegetable kingdom has nothing to offer. The earth is frozen and deeply covered with snow and ice, the birds have gone south and one might walk for miles without seeing a living creature At the same time it is of interest to know even these primitive people have for ages found a kind of substitute for food somewhere. Along the beach, which is known to have plenty of seaweed, holes are cut through the thick ice and the seaweed and mussels pulled up through the holes, and it is on record that the Eskimos have sustained life on this, one might say, refuse of the sea, during the long winter months.

The Eskimo has no word for "God" in his language, and it has been fitly marked that the very austere aspect of life may have helped to exclude the conception of a superhuman benevolent Being from the beliefs and superstitions of these people of the Arctic

Eskimos Believe It Is Not Necessary If They Have Enough Meat to Eat.

Where the physical struggle for life is at its keenest, as it is among the Eskimos, the years glide by free from the more subtle cares and worries of the civilized man. The Eskimo, says Mr Knud Rasmussen in 'The People of the Polar North," does not count the days, and keeps no record of time All his thoughts are centered on hunting

Once I asked an Eskimo who seemed to be plunged in reflection, "What are you thinking about?"

He laughed at my question, and said. "Oh, it is only you white men who go so much for thinking! Up here we only think of our flesh-pits, and whether we have enough for the long dark of the winter If we have meat enough then there is no need to think I have meat and to spare!"

I saw that I had insulted him by crediting him with thought.

On another occasion I asked an unusually intelligent Eskimo, Panigpak, who had taken part in Peary's last north polar expedition:

"Tell me, what did you suppose was the object of all your exertions? What did you think when you saw the land disappear behind you and you found yourself out on the drifting ice-floes?"

"Think?" said Panigpak, astonished. "I did not need to think. Peary did that!"

Eating becomes the great thing with the Eskimos I once excused myself, when paying a visit, with the plea that I had already eaten and had had enough. I was laughed at, and the answer I received was:

"There thou talkest like a dog! Dogs can be stuffed till they are satisfied and can eat no more; but people—people can always eat!"

Art and Engineering.

The close connection of the artistic and the mechanical instinct is shown again in recent developments in France.

France is doubtless the most eminent modern nation in the world of art. But in the past 30 years she has come to be one of the foremost in mechanical engineering, as the development of the automobile and the aeroplane bears witness. Coincidentally, there has been at least a relative falling off in her standing in art

This looks as if the demand of modern times had turned machine-wards the genius which in an earlier day would have expressed itself with brush and chisel.

The artist and the engineer or inventor have the same faculty of seeing a thing before it is finished, the same keen sense of proportion and relation, the same intense desire to put idea into concrete form

When America pauses from her rush in mechanical invention, she will develop an artistic power that will astonish the world.

One of the most interesting ships afloat is the Eagle, which lies in one of the docks of the River Mersey, England. For more than fifty years the Eagle has served as a training ship. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Charleroi people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Ewing, 913 Shady Ave, Charleroi, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills were used in our family some time ago with the best of results. We procured our supply at Piper Bros.' Drug Store. It does not take this remedy long to remove any attack of kidney trouble. I advise anyone troubled by disordered kidneys to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial.

WHERE THE CHILDREN OBEY

Courtesy to the Elders Universal in That Country, Makes the German Home Ideal.

As a rule German children of all classes are treated as children and taught the elementary virtue of obedience Das Recht des Kindes is a new cry with some of the people, but nevertheless Germany is one of the few remaining civilized countries where the elders still have rights and privileges. I heard of an English woman the other day who said that she had never eaten the wing of a chicken, because when she was young it was always given to the older people, and now that she was old it was saved for the children. If she lived in Germany she would still have a chance, provided she kept away from a small loud set, who in all matters of education and morality would like to turn the world upside down.

In most German homes the noisy, spoilt American child would not be endured for a moment, and the little tyrant of a French family would be [illegible] advantage of all concerned. I have dined with a large family where eight young ones of various ages sat at an overflow table and did not disturb their elders by a sound. It was not because the elders were harsh or the young folks repressed, but because Germany teaches its youth to behave.

The little girls still drop you a pretty old-fashioned courtesy when they greet you The little boys if you are staying in the house with them, come and shake hands at unexpected times—when they arrive from school, for instance, and before they go out for a walk. They play the same games as English children and I need hardly say that they are brought up on the same fairy stories, because many of our favorites come from Germany.—From "Home Life in Germany," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick

Old Darky Found His Talents Brought Him Into Grave Danger, and He Fled.

Senator John Sharp Williams tells of a "character" in a southern state known as "the best banjo player anywhere." It followed, therefore, that when a lady in the town whereof this instrumentalist is a resident wished to show some northern visitors just what a genuine old darky could do with a banjo she called at Uncle Henry's little cabin and stated her wishes to his wife.

"I is very sorry, missy," said the wife, "but Henry he ain't playin' de banjo any mo'." She then indicated the spot where the instrument lay, covered with dust. "He jes' puts in all his time fishin' now"

"What led him to give up his playing?" asked the visitor. "Has he got religion?"

"No, missy, dat wuthless nigger ain't got no religion. No, missy; he's done got skeered"

"Scared? Of what?"

"By dat minstrel show, honey De boss of dat show he hearn de ole man playin', an' he offers him a stidy job doin' it. Yassum, an' it skeered Henry so bad dat he quit banjo playin' right away."

So They All Ate Onions.

Sallie Fisher, the musical comedy star, who sang herself into the upper register of popular favor with that "Dearie" song, has a mother who occasionally gets Sallie into trouble. It was at a little dinner party in New York last season and there were four at the table, Sallie, her mother and two friends. Mrs. Fisher carefully scanned the menu card and then stated, with particular emphasis, that she wanted an order of Spanish onions, sliced and raw, and didn't care what else was ordered

"Mother!" ejaculated Sallie. "Onions? And before the performance?"

"Onions and before the performance," insisted Mrs Fisher. Then she cast a rather scornful expression toward the fastidious daughter. "If these boys could see you eating garlic in the summer time they would have no objections to my eating onions in the winter time," said Mrs Fisher, decisively, whereupon Sallie collapsed.

Then they all ate onions

She Hadn't Taught as Long as That.

A primary teacher, whose efficiency had extended her term of service in one school so long that she was teaching the second generation, frequently spoke to her pupils of the time when their parents had been in her room and often mentioned persons about town who had gone to school to her

Just before the winter holidays she took occasion to speak of the significance at Christmas, explaining that it was the anniversary of the birth of Jesus. The story was familiar to most of the children, but one little fellow, whose religious education was not as [illegible] as that of the others, spoiled the effect by innocently piping up:

"Did he ever go to school to you?"

LIVING TOWER IS UNIQUE

Captain Meeker Built It on the Tops of Four Redwood Trees In California.

What is known as the "Living Tower" (says a writer in the Wide World Magazine) stands on the very summit of a hill more than two hundred feet high at Camp Meeker, a summer resort in Sonoma county, California. It was Captain Meeker, an old pioneer, who first conceived the idea of building a tower on the very summit of a high hill near his hotel, and while looking around one day for a suitable site, he found four young redwood trees standing about twelve feet apart, representing a perfect square. The trees were each about one hundred and fifty feet high. Fifty feet of each top was lopped off, and the work of building six stories was then commenced From top to bottom the Living Tower was one hundred feet high. Each floor is about twelve by twelve feet, and rests on strong timbers, the ends of which are securely attached to the four trees by means of steel cables and bolts So strongly was every part braced that the whole structure does not move as much as one would naturally suppose, even when rocked by heavy winds. In the building great care was taken by the workmen to cut only the branches growing on the inside of the square, and the trees were not chopped, mutilated, or weakened any more than could possibly be avoided. Leading up from each story are broad stairways, so that one may ascend and descend with ease and perfect safety, while around the edge of each floor are strong railings to prevent accidents. Since this tower was completed, the trees have grown and flourished just as well as before This living tower is claimed to be the only one of its kind in the world.

DANCES FOR THE PARENTS

Hurdy-Gurdies With Old Peasant Tunes Cause Delight in New York's East Side.

Not long ago a picturesque experiment was made by a number of men and women who are interested in the welfare of the lower east side. As folk dancing has proved so popular with the children of the foreign residents of the city, as shown by the eagerness with which they have taken up the dancing lessons given in the public schools, the interested men and women decided that their parents might also be pleased with the opportunity of joining in some of the peasant dances with which they were familiar in their youth in the fatherland. With this idea in mind, a number of hurdy-gurdy players were persuaded to put into their machines records of the old native dance tunes to which the residents of the east side had been accustomed to dance at home.

Of course the records had first to be made, but this was done and a number of the hurdy-gurdies equipped in this manner were started on a triumphant career.

And were they successful? Well, it wasn't a question as to that. With the first sound of the well known [illegible] of the east side came tripping out of their houses mad with delight and breaking into their native steps the minute they reached the sidewalk.

"It was the greatest success in the world," declared one of the promoters of the project. "The only trouble was that it was too successful. They blocked the streets and the side walks and impeded traffic so that the police-men had difficulty in getting things started again. It was perfectly idyllic in theory, but, after all, Grand street isn't a village green and it didn't really do—it wasn't possible.

ALL COURTEOUS AND HONEST

High Praise of the Character of Eskimos and Icelanders Given By Explorers.

If we should ever learn to appreciate the finer values of human nature the results would certainly be damaging to our self esteem. Mr. Stefansson, whose reports of Eskimo life have received so much attention, tells us much of the extraordinary courtesy and virtue of these people, and so confirms the testimony to the same effect by Captain Amundson. Stefansson not only received the finest hospitality, but he tells us that his hosts suppressed every sign of curiosity as to his instruments and memoranda. They explained to him that these things were none of their business. They always sang when they approached his hut in the morning, so that he might not be taken unawares, and they politely waited outside until invited to enter. Coming further south we read that Iceland, with a population of 78,000, has only one policeman and that the taste for alcoholic liquors is practically unknown among the people A recent work on Finland tells us of a curious custom among the country people. Those who have money to deposit in the bank are in the habit of placing it on a stone in the public road and it is collected by the banker from the nearest town as he makes his periodical trips for that purpose. It may be that discourtesy and dishonesty are now inseparable from civilization, but a separation will have to be effected if the civilization is to endure.

Flight Would Not Be Hopeless.

Thomas B. Reed did not "think imperially," to use Mr. Chamberlain's sonorous phrase, and it was dangerous to wax eloquent in his presence over American expansion.

Once, when were in the thick of our troubles in the Philippines, Mr. Reed, Mr. Choate and Mr. G. W. Smalley were guests at Ellerslie, Governor Morton's place on the Hudson. The situation was debated at length and with great freedom.

"Mr. Choate," writes Mr. Smalley in "Anglo-American Memories," "gave us in a forcible and forensic way—and no man could state a case better—the reasons for keeping the Philippines and reducing the 'rebellious' Filipinos to order.

"We all listened. No one interrupted the flow of Mr. Choate's argument. Mr. Reed, who, as is well known, had opposed the acquisition of the islands, did not venture a word. At the end, Mr. Choate, urging that surrender was impossible, asked:

"'What do you suppose the Filipinos would do if we withdrew the American troops?'

"'Well,' drawled Mr. Reed, 'I don't suppose they would pursue us farther than San Francisco.'

"That ended the discussion," concludes Mr. Smalley.—Youth's Companion

Lure of Colonial Mirror.

Gazed there ever a man in the face of an old mirror the life of which dates back to Colonial days, without seeing therein some thoughts of powdered wigs, silk brocades, charming couples dancing the minuet and bowls of punch?

[illegible] of the Colonial period have survived the ravages of years and can be found in nearly all the eastern states and Canada. It is doubtful whether any mirrors were brought to this country much before 1700, for it was not until 1670 that they were made in England, although one may be able to pick up some very old specimens in Canada, as mirror making flourished in France in the early part of the eighteenth century.

BIRTHDAY HONOR SOCIAL FUNCTION FOR MISS CALVERT

In compliment to her birthday anniversary Miss Jean Calvert, of Fallowfield avenue was honor guest at a cleverly arranged surprise Friday night. The affair was planned and successfully carried out by her mother and the Calvert home was the scene of a very delightful affair. Girl friends to the number of a score and two responded to the invitations and gathered during the absence of Miss Calvert. Upon her return she found her home in the hands of her friends and though she was surprised, her ability as a hostess quickly asserted itself and the guests were made to feel at home.

A pleasant series of contests was enjoyed and Misses Roberta Trew and Nell Pieper were rewarded with dainty prizes. Musical numbers further enhanced the evening's enjoyment and later refreshments came as a pleasing diversion. Favors of carrying little baskets filled with bon bons were distributed.

Among the guests from out of town were Misses Alenda Forsythe and Alice Kelly of Monongahela and Mary Lindsay of Pittsburg
